The Venice Biennale was founded in 1895 and has become one of the most famous and prestigious cultural festivals in the world. Occurring every two years, the event aims to promote new contemporary art trends. As part of the 2015 Biennale, the 56th International Art Exhibition, titled “All The World’s Futures”, opened its doors to the public on 9 May. The exhibition is a unitary itinerary that starts at the Central Pavilion at the Giardini and continues at the Arsenale, with 136 artists from 53 countries, of whom 89 will be showing their art works for the first time.

Aquae Venice is a collateral event of the Expo Milano 2015, following the theme “Feeding the World”. The event is probably the largest event ever in the world to focus on food and nutrition. This universal exhibition in Venice is dedicated to the topic of water where it aims to describe, in a simple, experiential, educational and interactive way, how and why water deeply influences our lives. The exhibition also explains the way in which water supply will affect food industries across the world in the following decades.
