All illuminations run daily from 19:00 to midnight and are free for all visitors. Guests can explore the festival through a variety of LightSeeing tours by foot, bike or boat. Those who choose to do, be sure to savour the extraordinary brilliance that the capital will be illuminated with for a running tour. Jon Spencer Blues Explosion
• Date: 16 October
• Starting time: 20:00
• Venue: Columbia Theater, Columbiadamm 9–11
• www.columbia-theater.de

On their latest album, Freedom Tower: No Wave Dance Party 2015, the Jon Spencer Blues Explosion pay homage to their hometown of New York. And just as loud, colourful, dirty and frantic as the Big Apple are the 13 new songs on the album. There appears to be a harsh love between these three music veterans and the busy East Coast metropolis. Combining elements of rock ‘n’ roll, blues, noise and punk, the band’s music accentuates New York’s darkest sides, far away from the tourist masses and picture-perfect “I love NY” campaigns. Today, Jon Spencer, Judah Bauer and Russell Simins, whose explosive shows made them one of the most exciting live bands of the nineties, will be playing at the newly remodeled Columbia Theater. It will certainly be an evening of sweat and emotions!

Oktoberfest at Kurt-Schumacher-Damm
• Date: daily
• Starting time: Thursday and Friday 15:00, Saturday 14:00

There is no need to travel to Munich to experience the authentic Oktoberfest feeling in Germany! In fact, with all the blue and white decorations, traditional culinary delights, such as Hax’n [pork knuckle], Hend’l [roast chicken] and Leberkäs [a specialty meatloaf], and, of course, plenty of Germany’s famous festival beers, like Paulaner, to choose from, you won’t even notice you are not in the beloved Bavaria of Fairy Tale King Ludwig II. Traditionally, the Oktoberfest at Kurt-Schumacher-Damm is the biggest Bavarian Oktoberfest in the capital. In its 25th year already, it celebrates the Germans’ love for hearty food, folk music and tasty beer. Entry to the festival, with more than 50 funfair attractions, is free of charge.
