The best from dentistry in Scandinavia

Scandefa 2011 welcomes dental professionals to Copenhagen

During 7–9 April, 2011, the Bella Center in Copenhagen is opening its doors to dental professionals from Denmark and the wider Scandinavian region, with more than 170 domestic and international dental companies have announced their participation. The organiser expects more than 10,000 dental professionals to attend the show.

Scandefa is one of the largest trade shows in the region for dental equipment and materials. The first show was held back in 1968 as a part of The Danish Dental Association’s Annual Scientific Meeting and has grown ever since. According to figures by the organiser, a number of 11,349 visitors attended Scandefa in 2010—an increase of almost 10 per cent from 2009.

In Copenhagen, dental professionals will be able to get hands on the latest in dental products and technologies. Manufacturers have announced to showcase a wide variety of endodontic implants and implant superstructures, for example, that are increasingly manufactured in industrial milling centres as well as in house at dental laboratories. Companies specialised in this field are now even offering to design and manufacture complex prosthetic structures, especially with the use of zirconium, high-strength ceramics—layered or pressed ceramic veneers are now providing excellent solutions for patients that not only ask for highly functional but also aesthetic dental prosthetics.
